6. Schoenegg (14° 12' East, 48° 35' North), Upper Austria

On 26 April 1951 the Czechs began ditch work on the 500 - 600 meter Czech portion of the road between St. Stefan am Walde (14° 16' East, 48° 34' North) and Schoenegg. The road is now closed to Austrians, and direct traffic has ceased between Schoenegg and St. Stefan am Walde.

7. Koesslerdorf (14° 59' East, 48° 54' North), Czechoslovakia

The road block on the route between Koesslerdorf and Schoenau (15° 03' East, 48° 56' North), Lower Austria, was extended during the first week of June, 1951. An iron barrier, reinforced with concrete, was erected on this road in 1937. (3) The Czechs have now dug a ditch across the road in front of the block, at the same time piling up a mound of earth between the ditch and the Austrian border. The ditch is one meter deep and two meters wide; it extends from the south side of the road approximately 35 meters to the Reiss Bach and from the north side of the road approximately 25 meters to the Torfstich. - (3) Comment: Source states that the barrier is located "approximately 50 meters from the Austrian border station at Galthof and 350 meters west of Height 483". This description should probably read "50 meters from Height 483 and 350 meters west of Galthof", since Height 483 lies west of Galthof.

- (4) Comment: The Torfstich is not shown on available maps.
